Eden is a temperate and seemingly very prosperous land in the southwest of the world. Like most of the human nations, it is governed by a royal family in possession of a powerful artefact capable of creating knights.

2. Republic of Lancelot

The Republic of Lancelot is a desert nation located in the World of Eve. It was founded by members of King Arthur's pilgrimage that broke off shortly before reaching the neighboring "promised land" of Eden to the southwest. Lancelot's desert climate makes it heavily reliant its desalination technology to obtain water. Its military is also notoriously short-handed and the country frequently turns to neighboring Eden for reinforcement when it comes to controlling the monster population.

3. Kingdom of El Quixote

The Kingdom of El Quixote was founded towards the tail-end of King Arthur's pilgrimage from the human homelands in the lands now known as Central. With mountains to the west and north, and ocean to the east and south, El Quixote exists nearly in isolation from its nearest neighbours, Lancelot and Humpty. As a consequence, their closest neighbours are the Kalars of Kalar Village.

4. Kingdom of Humpty

The Kingdom of Humpty, here the food grows magically out of the ground, in ingredient, prepared, or partially prepared forms, all without need for cultivation. As many of the best ingredients were guarded by or consisted of meat from monsters, Humpty's chefs also gained a reputation as warriors. Some chefs are even appointed as Knights. In addition to Humpty's numerous food industries, the country is also home to a thriving shipping industry that operates worldwide, and to a wide variety of tourist sites.

5. City of Hamlet

The City-State of Hamlet is the headquarters of the Church of Eve, and occupies the northeastern continent of the World of Eve. The continent of Hamlet is largely uninhabitable, with most of its land being riddled with poisonous marsh. Because of the land's toxic ecology, the city-state relies on food imports from the Kingdom of Humpty to survive. However, the flora and fauna that live here have also served as the basis for significant medical developments, whose forefront is represented by the hospital town of Horatio currently administered by senator Laertes.

6. Central Empire

The land currently inhabited by the Central Empire is the original human homeland in the World of Eve. Following the death of Archfiend Adan, the climate grew dramatically colder, sealing the coasts of the continent during winter months and complicating life as food supplies began to dwindle.
