

GENERIC ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE

Sorry to be the bearer of bad news, but the world is dying.

I know, I know, you just got here and it's not fair - but that's just the way it has to be.

This world is sick. The leading authorities aren't sure why it's happening, if the cause is viral, bacterial, or something more sinister. Those religious nuts will tell you this is our divine punishment. Preposterous. As if God would allow this kind of suffering. We have no answers.

This illness, this plague, whatever we're dealing with - it's like nothing our world has seen before. People get sick and they die; if only it ended there. Loved ones, neighbours, coworkers - it didn't matter what they were before they turned. They weren't like us anymore.

They were something new, something worse, something dead.

But still they walked.

You'll walk here too, for the next ten years, provided you can survive them.

BUDGET

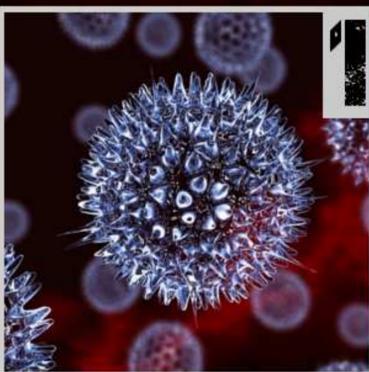

You won't be placed here without a chance though; You'll have these choice points, useful for familiarizing yourself with the old world, picking up helpful new skills and abilities, or taking new items to help ensure your survival. You keep everything from previous adventures, so spend every point wisely.

CHOICE POINTS

PANDEMIC CAUSE

This world is either on the fast track to an apocalypse or is already there. But what is it that drove humanity to this point? What kind of monsters are out there that threaten to replace humans as the next top of the food chain? You can choose one of 3 groups to be at fault.

ROLL 1D8
OR PAY 100CP TO CHOOSE

1 PATHOGEN

Viruses are common and changing, with this one being particularly hard to pin down. Though technically still alive, the infected you will face have been irreversibly changed into little more than rabid beasts by pathogen they're infected with. Due to their still living state, these are naturally the most lively of the zombie varieties. They're more than capable of chasing down a survivor at high speed like the hungry predator they've become. This also tends to spread quite quickly.

2 PARASITE

Due to its larger size, the parasite is more difficult to pass on than other causes. Hosts are driven to extreme aggression when it's time for the parasite to reproduce and they hijack their host's nervous system. With above human level speed and strength zombies can typically restrain healthy victims while they transfer the new larvae into them. Usually attacking in groups and picking the vulnerable in the early stages, the parasite may escape notice until it's too late. Hosts are fully aware of the creature in them, but can do nothing to resist.

3 CHEMICAL

It is easy to discover the origin of zombies created by serums, radiation, or toxins. It is impossible to cure them sadly, since individual cells have all absorbed the dangerous material. Some are reputed to retain an ability to speak and lure people into ambushes. Others gain additional, increasing fearsome mutations as a result of different doses or unique genetic quirks interacting with the contaminant they were exposed to. Supposedly these zombies are fond of brains, but they're content to give you a contagious bite anywhere.

4 FUNGAL

The fungal infected are terrifying in their twitchy, inhuman movements, their ability to track by heat, the ease in which they infect, and the way the zombification begins to take hold long before the host is lost. Some hosts struggle for hours or days as they lose more and more control, feeling the new organism taking control of movements and jerking their limbs around in ways they were not designed to bend. Severed body parts remain completely functional independently. The zombie fungus shies away from cold and is inactive in winter.

5 BLACK MAGIC

More sinister foes command zombie armies using their unspeakable dark arts. With some relying on voodoo, you may be forced to combat innocent living humans who are simply being compelled against their will to do you harm. Others still rely on classical necromancy to bolster their forces, raising incredibly enduring and truly undead servants. Not all is grim here however, there is a chance that by defeating individual practitioners you will be able to free those under their control and allow the dead to find peace.

6 DIVINE RETRIBUTION

We're not sure which religion is to blame, but all of the spokespeople seem to be taking the credit on behalf of their god. Even those formerly areligious have taken to putting the blame on Mother Earth. It certainly seems that the damage humans formerly did to the planet has been turned back on us, and Earth seems all the greener for it. Even the undead fail to rot, looking as eerily pristine as the moment they died. In this scenario, every single dead body will rise from the grave.

7 FREE CHOICE

Looks like it's your lucky day. You can choose to face whichever of the seven options you feel suits you best.

8 HIVEMIND

Something far greater than zombies is the threat here. These zombies are controlled by some higher being, spreading its malevolent influence with dark energy or incomprehensible technology. Such tainted humans cannot be saved, nor can the process be stopped. One small blessing is that you are one of the few with complete immunity to this corruption. The hordes function as tactical units under the guidance of their unfathomable master. Whatever it is one thing is clear: free, living humans are not part of its final plan for Earth.

THE FOLLY OF MAN

People purposely designed this as a weapon in order to use it against their enemies. Some might say we got what we deserved. Some might also worry what other bioweapons they have stashed away somewhere.

NATURE

Mankind's disrespect for the Earth and constant pollution have either corrupted the natural world to create this abomination or forced the spirit of the planet to seek aid from mystic forces. Until the world is as unpolluted as before the industrial era nature will not relent.

CONSUMERISM

Mankind's inherent greed and gluttony have spawned this horror into existence. As long as humans still live in pursuit of the material situations will be unable to improve.

PANDEMIC PHASE

So now you know what you're dealing with, and have a vague idea as to what's causing it. Next up we'll figure out how far into this mess you are. Depending on your contagion things could progress very quickly after Phase Zero. You may choose a conspiracy theory for the loonies.

ROLL 1D8

1 PRE-APOCALYPSE

Zombies are a thing of fiction, regarded as little more than the subject of scary films. Most people go about their daily lives and only focus on issues that affect them. A large number of madman seem to be getting vocal lately cropping up, forecasting the end times as something soon to come. Only two months left.

2 PHASE ZERO

Humans have developed symptoms of the new mystery ailment frequently enough that it warrants investigation by health authorities worldwide. Efforts are made to study the effects of the ailment and catalogue them. The cause of the condition is still unknown and it is uncertain how it transmits.

3 PHASE ONE

Several outbreaks occur within a single region. A frightening first experience with the potential death toll if the condition is not contained becomes apparent. Martial law may be used in a desperate effort to stem the spread. Many of the 'lunatics' that predicted the apocalypse begin retreating to the prepared shelters.

4 PHASE TWO

Outbreaks are occurring in multiple countries and it has truly reached pandemic status. The condition spreads from region to region rapidly. World governments frantically mount offensive plans with their remaining military forces, however many soldiers have defected for the safety of their families back home.

5 END AS WE KNOW IT

The civilized world has been devastated by the zombie menace. Most persons have had personal experiences with the condition, though there are still isolated places untouched by the horror that is to come. Pre-Apocalypse ravings come to be accepted as the reason for the apocalypse in many circles.

6 APOCALYPSE

Worldwide saturation of the pandemic. None are unaware of the danger that the zombies pose to the survival of humanity. Pockets of survivors remain, some searching for the fabled last bastion of safety. This state may last decades, either leading slowly to recovery or having the human race dwindle further.

7 FREE CHOICE

Luck is on your side. You may begin at any of the available options for progression of the pandemic, with the earliest Pre-Apocalypse starting time being a full year before Phase Zero. You can also designate the widely believed conspiracy theory for the world, and are not restricted to the below 3 choices.

8 BEYOND THE END

Practically no living people remain on the Earth. Zombies may be thinning out as the ravages of time take their toll, but the condition makes a combat as it adapts to infect previously immune persons. There is unlikely to be enough survivors to allow humanity to survive as a race.

NAZIS

Another of the secret Nazi ventures into the supernatural, this was one of their most dangerous weapons. Hitler intended to use it against the world, but only managed to infect himself. The contagion spread because Zombie Hitler escaped a secret facility and now wanders the Earth once more.

COMET

The passing of Comet Lovejoy in early January 2015 was actually an alien device sent past earth to spread the zombie contagion onto the human population. It was invited here by special deep space probes sent up by a rogue division of NASA. Once everyone is infected, the aliens will return to raise humans as pets.

SECOND COMING

The events unfolding in the world are exactly as the original biblical prophecy foretold. The bible we have now is a fake planted by dinosaurs. If once has the courage to delve into the pyramids where the dinosaurs hid it the first bible, they can learn who is the next incarnation of Jesus and end the apocalypse.

LOCATION

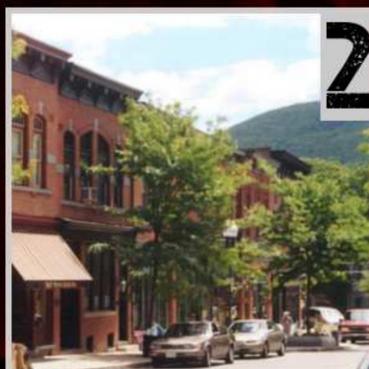

Now that we've got the when and why of it covered, it's time to figure out where in this messy world you're going to be left in. You can choose to explore the rest of the world and pick the specific location of your strating location, as long as you remain within description limits.

ROLL 1D8

1 CABIN IN THE WOODS

A cozy scenic abode on the fringe of society. It is stocked with enough food for two months. Though small, it manages space for two separate bedrooms and even has a modern well for producing its own running water in the humble kitchen and bathroom. It has some solar power to make energy, but little defenses.

2 SMALL TOWN

This town still boasts plenty of character despite it's small size. Compared to bigger cities it has friendly people and lower crime. If you were raised here before the contagion spread there's a good chance you can at least recognize most folks on sight. People are much more trusting here, and things often unlocked.

3 SUBURBIA

Life in the suburbs! Most of the houses look nearly identical so even the braindead can spot little differences like a dark home compared to a candle-lit one. Still, they are relatively spacious places to stay and tend to offer a variety of scavengable resources nearby.

4 MEGAMALL

Located in a big city, this place offers all the shopping you could need and is a veritable fortress in many a zombie apocalypse - as long as you can be sure that shatterproof windows remain intact and any hostile forces inside are taken care of. It has tons of resources and potential on the rooftop for growing food.

5 URBAN UNDERGROUND

Whether it's the subway or sewer system, you'll find there aren't a lot of choices in which direction to go from here. At least you can usually hear an enemy coming before you see them. The tight space offers little chances to run away and you could easily be cornered in a crisis.

6 ISOLATED WILDERNESS

There's not much nearby except for a crashed ambulance. You're a bit bruised, but otherwise perfectly alright. It seems you're here alone, despite plenty of evidence there were others in the vehicle before the crash. You might be able to follow the tracks back to a road after a few hours walk. A selection of fine medical supplies!

7 FREE CHOICE

Luck is on your side. You may begin at any of the given options or select somewhere completely different. Hunting Store? Liquor Store? Maybe you're just looking to ride out the apocalypse in a Candy Shop, or on the open road (and that's fine too).

8 MAJOR CITY HOSPITAL

With news of the outbreak spreading, this place is either going to be packed with the sick or packed with the walking dead. The population of the surrounding city will likely fare no better, and your best option here is to find a way out. This particular hospital housed one of the first human cases of the contagion.

DANGER WARNING: GROWL

Before a zombie makes an attack, it will let out a fearsome growl upon seeing a target. This will give you an idea of where it is as long as you're nearby. If a zombie lacks the physical ability to make the noise, it will remain quiet.

DANGER WARNING: LIGHTS

The walking dead seem to have a curious effect on radios and electronics when they gather. Any buildings with a large number of infected will show signs by making devices flicker in and out of usefulness. You'll need to clear out the undead to stop this effect from slowly taking a toll on your electronics.

DANGER WARNING: NONE

You don't want to end up relying on cheap gimmicks to let things spot your enemies for you. That only leads to being caught off guard when you can't rely on the trick. With this, zombies behave as normal and have no effect on the nearby electronics.

You can choose one of the danger warning options above for a heads up on when zombies will attack.

BACKGROUND

With the world figured out all you have left is to decide your place in it. Maybe you don't know who you were, in which case you'll gain no new memories of the world. But if you want to be more than just a survivor, you'll get a whole does of familiarity with this world. These memories come with a whole new personality, with as much sway over your opinions and habits as the original you.

SURVIVOR

You wake up in a bed or on a stretcher, and discover a few machines attached to you presumably meant to keep you alive. You don't need them now that you're awake, but you can't help but feel something strange about the whole situation. Perhaps it will pass. You have no identification, nor any no new memories of who you are in this world. That may be for the best, since you won't have to face any new personality conflicting with your decisions or sense of self. Unfortunately this lack of history also means you don't have a home to return to or any friends in this world. Good luck making it out there on your own without any knowledge of the world to guide you.

FREE

DOCTOR

You have a solid grasp of mundane diseases and their treatments - very useful knowledge for when the festering dead are walking the Earth. You're also quite competent when it comes to actually healing physical injuries. Medical ethics technically require a physician to show consideration and benevolence for their patients - but you feel sometimes there just isn't time for that in an emergency. You're far more dedicated to the work of physically improving the body than ensuring your patients feel good about their treatment. You don't necessarily need to have formerly worked as a general practitioner, but you have completed medical school and likely hold a position in medicine or a related field.

AUTHORITY

Your pre-apocalypse career could have been one in the military or police work, even something less violent like firefighting. Regardless, you've spent a lifetime being an everyday hero facing danger and saving lives (or at least look like it). You may not have been the one in charge before the end times, but now that they're here the only rules you have to follow are your own. Though you have no one to answer to, other will take notice of your confidence and look to you to lead them through the dark days that lie ahead. You're very healthy and fit, with a resilience to the initial terror other survivors experience.

TRADESMAN

Like a doctor, the tradesman has an invaluable skill that sets them apart from the rest of the people who are just struggling to survive this world. You can fix things. You might not be able to fix the whole world, but you can keep a small part of it running almost as comfortably as it was before the zombies came and ruined everything. Though not necessarily a master craftsman, it's always useful to have someone around who can reinforce defenses and keep the hot water running. With all the people lost, many people will see a novice as someone just as helpful as an expert anyway. Basic construction is easily in your grasp but you have a fondness for improving things beyond the basic.

CLERGY

When the end came, you turned to religion for the answer, much as you did throughout your life. The religion is your choice, though up to you to decide, must be something openly practiced in the modern world. With the apocalypse upon you, you can decide to keep to the original teachings or adjust them to fit with end-of-the-world values. People who share in your religion will naturally tend to see you as more trustworthy than the faithless masses, and even they will see you as a person of morality. The new world is a dark place though, and you should take care not to allow those that follow you to become cult-like in their ways. Unless you want something like that.

DOOMSDAY PREPPER

While everyone else was caught unprepared when the zombie apocalypse arrived, you always knew it would come to this. Though you still understand the lunatic's claims as nothing but fantasy, you were able to tie link together events and had time to ready yourself. You've stashed approximately two year's worth of food to keep yourself fed for the emergency - a long enough for the military to come in and clean up the situation or for you to start harvesting your own homegrown food. You are incredibly cautious, verging on paranoid when dealing with others. It's not to say you won't help others, just you prepare for them to be out to harm you. Better to be safe than sorry, after all.

CROSS-SPECIES

Instead of dealing with only humans, you'll have plenty of infected animals to deal with. Birds, rodents, insects, even large predators will turn. The only things that seem to resist infection are sharks and crocodiles, but they're still pretty eager to eat fresh meat.

+100CP

CROUCHING DEAD HIDDEN DEAD

They don't all shamble around. In fact, almost all of them seem to have a knack for staying perfectly out of sight, either under a thin layer of dirt, obscured by murky water, or simply just lying in wait around a corner for someone to walk into their path.

CARRIER

So it seems like you're infected. No worries though, because it's not going to do you any harm. It will however put a damper on your relationship with everyone you interact with. Touching or breathing others will spread the plague onto them in no time, and safeguard you use will often fail without warning.

BONED

You've heard of destroying the brain? Turns out we weren't entirely correct about that. You actually need to smash the whole skull, otherwise a darn skeleton will pop right out of that fleshy shell and continue fighting with far more fervor than the zombies ever did.

PSYCHOPATHS

The humans here are frail of mental stability, and this whole apocalypse thing seems to have broken more than a few minds. Many remaining humans are thoroughly deranged, happier to hunt down survivors than work towards their own survival.

SICKLY

You're not well, not a bit. It's not the zombie thing, thank goodness, but it easily could be if you're not careful. You're more susceptible to illness than others and are constantly feeling under the weather. If one of the walking dead so much as drools on you it could be an emergency.

ZOMBIES VERSUS

The zombies (and their potential masters) aren't the only concern this world faces. There is something else just as dangerous to humanity. Thankfully because they share the same food source the two sometimes get into fights that reduce one groups numbers. See the table provided on the following page.

NO REST FOR THE WICKED

It seems almost impossible to kill the walking dead, even a little bit. They're no stronger than before, but severed limbs or bits continue living even once detached. They also grow horrifyingly more vocal, usually moaning for release from their eternal torment.

LAND OF THE DEAD

It's not just humans, it's not even just living things. Plants and inanimate objects corrupt when infected, some even becoming semi-mobile zombie objects! The very planet itself seems to contract the taint and it spreads over the globe. Merely touch won't infect you, but don't get undead earth or food in your system.

ZOMBIES VERSUS

All these foes have a big advantage over normal humans in their strength and willingness to commit violence. None will ever be willing to work with humans; the most you can hope for is not to be immediately targeted. Enjoy fighting your apocalypse on two fronts.

ROLL 1D8

YES THAT MEANS OCP GAINED

1 UNICORNS

Unicorns may not sound terribly threatening to those who have never tried to fight a horse. Now imagine a horse that can gallop across rainbows, has a weapon built into its head, and hates all men and non-virgins with a burning intensity. Their regenerative blood makes them very hard to kill, but not impossible to zombify.

2 WEREWOLVES

When the moon rises so does an beastly energy within some men. In this transformed state these humans slaughter their fellow man to sate their bloodlust and hunger, with little memory of their normal selves. They are eager to fight the undead as well, but they can only get a satisfying meal from non-zombified life.

3 VAMPIRES

More undead! Vampires cannot handle the sunlight, but they are deadly foes at night. They can enthrall others to do their dirty work during the day regardless. They are exceptionally fast and strong, and mortals find them supernaturally alluring. They feed on blood.

4 NERDS

Intelligent and underappreciated before the world went to hell, these self-proclaimed nerds have banded together to take their revenge on what's left of the world. They create powerful robots to act through, remotely controlling them to exterminate zombies, survivors, and anything else standing in their way. Pretty men die first.

5 PLANTS

Zombies and plants are natural foes, and with the rise of zombies the plants have grown sentient and gained minor mobility. Their preferred nourishment comes from the fresher humans, but they won't say no to any living things that wander in range of their roots either.

6 ALIENS

We are not alone in the universe. That revelation has come a bit late for some. Aliens are making a rush to collect as many untainted samples as they can from the safety of their ships. What happens once a person is aboard is unknown, but it certainly isn't good. Sometimes explorers drop down in their own brand of shielded suits.

7 FREE CHOICE

Luck favours you. You may choose any creature to face in this world. You may choose from the listed options or determine your own monster, but bear in mind they must be more dangerous than the zombies and will be hostile towards humanity. Evil catgirl armies allowed.

8 DRAGONS

Big dragons, small dragons - all you need to know is they breathe fire and don't like anyone but other dragons. Actually there is more you should know: They have very tough hides, many of them are capable of flight, and they are just as smart (or smarter) than people. These proud beings will not tolerate any other creatures.

NOTES

All monsters (including the nerd's robots) can contract the zombie plague when bitten or otherwise harmfully exposed, and are no less dangerous in this state. They may prove more of a problem, since they will show no hostility towards zombies once they're among them.

MULTIPLE PURCHASES

You can take the Zombies Versus drawback as many times as you want. You can only gain a maximum of 200cp from taking the drawback however, additional monster factions offer no point benefit. If you roll duplicate monsters, just roll again.

BONED COMPATIBILITY

Skeletons who are bitten slowly regrow their outer zombie layer and return to fighting alongside their zombie brothers. Skeletons will normally wage a battle against the zombies if given the chance (but not if they have the opportunity to attack the living).
