

Hajime No Ippo: The Jumpchain!

In the bustling city of Tokyo, a young man named Ippo Makunouchi endures a hard life helping with his mother's fishing store which in turn leaves him little room for socialization giving him his status as an outcast. Almost daily, he faces torment from school bullies. One fateful day, as he walks home from school, he is cornered by a group of thugs. Just as the situation turns dire, he is saved by a passing boxer named Takamura, whose confident demeanor radiates strength and assurance. For Ippo, this encounter sparks a profound epiphany, igniting a flame within his heart and setting him on a path he never could have imagined. With a burning question echoing in his mind - "What does it mean to be Strong?" - Ippo embarks on a journey that will lead him into the hallowed ring of professional boxing, a realm where strength is measured not just in physical prowess, but in the resilience of spirit and the courage to face one's fears head-on, with his quest for his answer leading him through the Featherweight circuit and eventually the world.

Your arrival in this world occurs a day before his fated encounter with Takamura that will forever alter the course of his destiny. Armed with 1000CP and a burning Yamato Damashii.

Origins

Your role in the world! Feel free to decide how you will enter it!

Spectator! As a dedicated spectator of the sport, you find solace and inspiration in witnessing the raw intensity and unyielding determination displayed within the boxing ring. Whether seated ringside or watching from afar, you possess a keen eye for the nuances of the sport and a deep appreciation for the trials and triumphs of its competitors.

Professional! Having recently obtained your boxing license, you stand poised to enter the fray as a contender within the Japanese boxing circuit. With determination coursing through your veins and the thrill of competition driving you forward, you embark on a journey to test your mettle against the best fighters in the world.

Coach! You've seen a few fights in your day and fought in many more so you decided to use this hard-earned knowledge to teach young'uns to become professional pugilists! . As a mentor and guide, you seek to mold raw talent into champions, nurturing the aspirations of aspiring fighters and instilling within them the principles of discipline.

Location:

Your journey will begin in Tokyo, surrounded by the vibrant city life in the same area the main characters live. While Tokyo is your starting point, you're free to pick anywhere that you wish, perhaps the farther away to Osaka, Nagoya or even beyond Japan, if you so choose.

Any perks tied to a selected origin are discounted by half with 100 cp perks being free for buying.

Professional Perks:

(100)Sweet Science! Through grueling hours of training, you've developed the fighting skills of a professional boxer. Your punches carry respectable weight, and your footwork grants agility and grace. Your proficiency sets you apart from amateur enthusiasts, marking you as a rising contender in the ring.

(100)I Want to Dive! For most people in this series, boxing holds a special place in their hearts. From saving them from going down a dark path to giving them the confidence to be more than what they are, it's something they think about a lot. With this perk, you'll have the same passion as them pushing you forward, seeing every win in the ring as fuel to make you even better and every loss as a lesson to learn from.

(200) Remember Your Style! Boxing is a complex sport filled with many different types of techniques and strategies, with no one type wholly dominating the other. Generally, there are four accepted types of fighting styles used to define fighters. This perk grants you an affinity with any one specific style of fighting, whether it's the forceful punches of the peek-a-boo, the strength and range of the hitman style, or the more instinctual and unpredictable pure violence. Your mastery of your chosen style enhances your ability to learn specific techniques, giving you an edge in the ring. You may use this perk again to have talents in multiple styles.

(200CP) Echoes of Strength! This world is one of action, where people transform themselves into something more than what they are, and it shows in how they move and the presence they project. You are now capable of resonating your fists with vivid imagery and sensations. When you square back and land a hit, it creates a unique auditory or visual effect—like the sound of an airplane roaring, the crackling smoke of an explosion that comes with powerful punches, or the feeling of being stalked by a wolf's howl echoing in the arena. These effects not only enhance your presence in the ring, unnerving your opponents and potentially lowering their morale. This perk allows you to choose the specific imagery or sound that your opponent feels when they fight you.

(200)Weightless Control! Through hard discipline, natural talent, or the influence of some otherworldly being, you've developed an extraordinary ability to manage your body's weight. This perk enables you to safely shed or gain weight rapidly without sacrificing strength, endurance, or agility. You possess a near-intuitive understanding of how your body responds to different foods—a skill that typically takes years of trial and error for fighters to master. Your ability will leave less naturally talented fighters cursing you for not having to endure the struggles they face, especially when they see you effortlessly achieving your desired physique in no time at all.

(400) Speed Star! Through dedicated training, your footwork is honed to a razor's edge, accompanied by heightened reflexes and timing. You now have the potential and talent to ascend to the ranks of the fastest fighters in your weight class, with movements that, if properly honed, can be so swift they become a blur to most observers, leaving them struggling to keep up with your lightning-quick strikes and evasive maneuvers.

(400) Tiger Eyes! You have the look of a natural killer now. To many of your opponents, the feeling they get from fighting you is akin to being locked in a cage with a wild animal—a sort of primal fear that raises their goosebumps and leads most of your opponents to make what would otherwise be rookie mistakes or flinch at the slightest movement. If you were especially vicious while fighting them, you might make them swear off the ring entirely, leaving them with trauma that stays with them for the rest of their days.

(400) No Pain Trance! You often hear athletes talk about that special moment when the body is hyper-aware, everything slows down, and they know exactly what to do at just the right moment. You have unlocked that state. For a moment, you can focus solely on defeating your opponent; everything grays out, everyone slows down, and people will see a glow in your eye. This state can help you land that one knockout blow or dodge a fight-ending punch. However, be warned: this state is taxing for the mind, so don't use it recklessly. It takes the best fighters in this world considerable training to gain the power to switch it on and off.

(400) Dynamite Punch! Your fists are akin to carved stone, possessing one of the most potent punches in your weight class. Despite lacking formal training, your natural punching power delivers impactful blows that catch opponents off guard. Your punches, even when blocked, carry a kinetic force that can still make others reel in pain. With enough experience, it might come to be known that your punches can be likened to a small explosion hitting their face due to the pain they inflict.

(400) I Didn't Feel a Thing! For all the talk about how important technique and good footwork are in deciding fights, you know that the most crucial attribute for a fighter to have is guts, which you now possess in spades! You have an insanely high pain tolerance and a cast-iron jaw, able to take several of your opponent's best shots directly and get up with little issue, earning you a reputation as an incredibly tenacious fighter. Please note, however, that your body is made of more than just willpower; you might end up worse off faster than most people who take up the gloves if you get too comfortable.

(400) Dirty Fighting! Boxing is a sport filled with monsters that a normal person has no chance of beating fairly, so you have no choice but to try anything you can to win! You are now adept at using illegal blows and techniques, knowing how to position yourself to block the ref's line of sight and weave cheap shots into your style without being noticed, giving you a distinct advantage over many of your opponents.

(400) Refined and Polished! Fighters in this world tend to focus too much on their Sunday punches and special techniques, often to the detriment of their fundamentals, something you know is a mistake! Your basics have now been polished to a mirror sheen, making you an outstanding orthodox boxer. With continued practice you can become a formidable force, winning fights through solid fundamentals rather than predictable, easy-to-counter tricks.

(400) Pure Brawler! Some people seem born for violence. While some fighters build up their strength through training, others rely on sheer instinct rather than technique to avoid and deal damage. You are now endowed with an animalistic sixth sense, turning you into a truly unpredictable fighter. You can throw strong and accurate punches from strange angles and predict your opponent's moves, making you a formidable force in the ring.

(600) Fist of Life! The punch of a boxer is made to ensure the person they're punching is struck down hard and never gets back up again—your fists are those of death. On the other hand, your fists are those of life. While other boxers aim to destroy their opponents, after someone loses to you, they are filled with a sudden surge of motivation to improve from the last fight, with any animosity slowly fading into a sort of friendly rivalry.

(600) A Monster Alongside Monsters Deep within you lies a drive—a drive to be the one who stands atop the mountain of this sport, turning yourself into a champion who obliterates everything in your path, both in the ring and out, aiming to become the boxing champion of the whole damn world. This inborn ambition unlocks the focus needed to ascend to the realm of the greatest fighters. Your body becomes naturally suited for boxing, with your strength, speed, and technique improving rapidly at a seemingly infinite rate, making you a ruthless, unstoppable force destined to have a championship belt around your shoulders one day, regardless of your coach's quality. However, this rapid growth comes at a cost: as you win and keep winning, you lose an essential part of your humanity as you fully realize yourself as a monster. Your empathy deteriorates, replaced by a slow-growing arrogance, causing you to see everything as mere obstacles to your goals. Over time, the crowd and those once close to you may begin to resent or even hate you, leaving you an isolated figure despite your monumental success. But I suppose it doesn't matter compared to being seen as the best of the best to ever walk the ring.

Coach Perks!

(100) Appraising Eye! Having spent years in the sport, you've developed an instinct for recognizing potential in others. With this perk, you can assess a person's aptitude for fighting at a glance, identifying their strengths and pinpointing the areas they need to develop as athletes.

(100) Kamogawa Magic! Drawing on the wisdom of a master coach, you possess the unique ability to create highly effective training programs tailored to each individual fighter. Your expertise enables you to push your students to their limits without risking burnout, transforming raw talent into championship contenders in record time.

(200) Let Them Fight! Your mastery of the boxing political landscape allows you to navigate the complexities of arranging fights with ease. You possess the persuasive skills necessary to secure favorable terms and agreements swiftly, ensuring your fighters face the opponents they need to advance their careers.

(200) What Are You Chasing? As a coach with a lifetime of experience in the sport, you can easily recognize when someone is losing their spirit and straying from their path. This wealth of experience allows you to advise your students effectively, helping them identify what's holding them back and guiding them back to the ring with renewed determination.

(400) Keep Punching His Stomach! When your fighter is on the back foot and comes to the corner exhausted, they may struggle to focus on strategy. With this perk, you can communicate essential instructions using simple, direct phrases that your fighter instinctively understands. For example, telling them to target their opponent's lower body helps maintain their focus and prevent dangerous hooks.

(400) Spirit Slap! Imagine this: in the late rounds, your fighter is exhausted and barely conscious after battling a formidable opponent. While a typical coach might consider throwing in the towel, you know a better way. With a quick, strong, and strategically painful slap to the back, you can reignite your fighter's fighting spirit, giving them the energy they need to finish the remaining rounds. Their reaction to this unexpected motivation will depend on their personality.

(400) Primary Second! In boxing, a cornerman (or second) plays a crucial role in assisting a fighter during a bout. With this perk, you've honed the skills necessary to excel as a second, knowing the best techniques to quickly stop bleeding, manage hair that obstructs vision, and position the stool for maximum comfort.

(400) Fist of God! The bond between a fighter and their coach can become incredibly deep, with some coaches viewed as father figures. Under your direct guidance, fighters will quickly form strong connections with you, absorbing your lessons and philosophy with near-fanatical devotion. Your words will serve as a constant source of inspiration and advice.

(400) I Want to Get Him in the Ring! Many individuals possess natural fighting talent but often lead unruly lives that require more than just words to entice them. With this perk, you know exactly how to motivate anyone—from a random street thug to a wild child—to drop their current life and join you in the ring as a fighter, with you as their coach.

(400) Still Got It! Time may be a cruel opponent, turning once-mighty fighters into aging warriors struggling to maintain their strength. Fortunately, this perk allows you to retain all your power and skill, regardless of your age. You could easily become a world champion again, proving that age is just a number in the boxing ring.

(600) Light a Fire! The life of a coach often involves a lot of yelling to keep your charges focused and motivated. Through years of experience, you've mastered the art of igniting motivation in even the laziest individuals. Your powerful voice can inspire athletes to engage in the exercises you've taught them, even in your absence.

Spectators Perks!

(100) An in! Your innate ability to connect with others effortlessly extends to the boxing community. Boxers, coaches, and fans alike find themselves drawn to you, feeling a sense of trust and camaraderie in your presence. Your warm demeanor and genuine interest in their stories make you a beloved figure in the world of fighters, opening many doors in this world.

(100) Bonding vow! Your mastery of persuasion enables you to wield promises with profound impact. Whether it's convincing a boxer to retire for their own well-being or inspiring them to pursue their dreams with unwavering dedication, your words hold tremendous sway. Your ability to elicit emotional responses and foster a sense of accountability ensures that promises made in your presence are honored without fail.

(200) Beacon of Resolve! Your presence radiates an aura of inspiration, igniting a spark within those who cross your path. Boxers, trainers, and fans alike find renewed motivation and determination in your company, emboldened to chase their dreams and conquer their obstacles. Your words and actions serve as beacons of hope and encouragement, guiding others toward greatness in the ring and beyond.

(200) Ringside chronicle! Your talent for capturing the essence of boxing through the written word is unparalleled. As a sports journalist, your articles transcend mere reporting, transporting readers into the heart of the action with vivid descriptions and compelling narratives. Your insight and passion for the sport shine through in every word, immersing readers in the electrifying world of boxing and leaving them hungry for more.

(400) Second wind! it can be said that a fighters fist is heavy not just because of the training they do but the promises they take and make to the people that support them in the ring, that extra piece helping see through the toughest challenges and if anything can help a fighter not lose, it's not being seen as lame in front of the ones they care for! Now with this, boxers facing exhaustion or doubt find solace and strength in your presence, tapping into an inner reserve of determination and resilience. Your unwavering support and encouragement bolsters their spirits, enabling them to push through adversity and emerge victorious from the hardest flights! Or at least come out of it not too busted anyway if the enemy is that overwhelming.

(400) Foresight of the Ring! You now possess a unique intuitive ability, sometimes seen as magical, specifically attuned to the domain of fighting and boxing matches. Your intuition, combined with a touch of card divination, grants you the power to predict the outcome of battles and boxing matches with surprising accuracy. However, this ability has its limits and works only in situations involving combat and sports contests, and not much else."

(600) Illustrated Glory!! Not everyone's talent can be fighting, interestingly enough the boxing world seems to be filled with an oddly high number of people that can draw well much like yourself. Whether you were a boxer before or not, you possess an intuitive understanding of the manga medium. You grasp the power of visual storytelling, utilizing panel layouts, perspectives, and composition to heighten the impact of your storytelling. Each page becomes a symphony of imagery, seamlessly guiding readers through the story and evoking powerful emotions.

DRAWBACKS!

(OCP) A step never taken- For whatever reason maybe Takamura was too focused on something or decided to take another route during his roadwork he never saw Ippo under that bridge and never saved him from those bullies. depriving him of the pivotal moment that spurred his journey into the world of boxing. As a result, Ippo remains a shy and lonely individual, struggling to find his place in the world. It's up to you whether you intervene to become his mentor and guide him on the path to becoming a boxer, or if he continues to navigate life's challenges on his own, potentially missing out on his chance to shine in the ring.

(100) Out of Touch: As a veteran in the boxing world, you struggle to adapt to the ever-evolving landscape of the sport. Modern techniques, training regimens, and fighter mentalities leave you feeling outdated. Your inability to connect with newer styles may hinder your effectiveness as a coach or fighter, making it difficult to maintain relevance in a sport that values innovation.

(100) If only I was 50 years younger: You find yourself past your prime, your glory days long behind you. While your wealth of experience and knowledge may still be valuable, your physical abilities have greatly diminished. No longer capable of delivering knockout blows or competing at the highest level, you must come to terms with your limitations and find alternative ways to contribute to the world of boxing. Perhaps your role now lies in coaching, passing on your wisdom to the next generation of fighters.

(100) AoKimura syndrome: You become the subject of ridicule and mockery, enduring a constant barrage of jokes and humiliation from those around you. From harmless teasing to more hurtful remarks, you find yourself the target of ridicule in various aspects of your life, ranging from mildly annoying to deeply distressing. Despite the challenges, you must find the strength to persevere and rise above the ridicule, proving your worth through your actions and achievements.

(200) Butterface!: Your physical appearance leaves much to be desired, despite possessing a boxer's impressive physique. You are constantly overlooked or dismissed due to your unattractive facial features, you must contend with the harsh reality of being judged by your appearance. While your boxing skills may be formidable, your confidence and self-esteem may suffer as a result of the constant scrutiny and lack of validation from others.

(200) Local grown body! This a normal world barring some slightly comedic events that might show otherwise I doubt you would be in much trouble especially if you don't participate in boxing. Whether you choose to pursue a career outside of boxing or embrace the challenges of the sport, your journey will be defined by the choices you make and the obstacles you overcome using your body mod.

(400) This guy uses both hands!: Misfortune seems to follow you into the ring, as you or your fighters consistently face opponents who possess significant advantages in skill, strength, or strategy. Whether it's facing opponents with superior technique or physical prowess, you always find yourself on the back foot, forced to adapt and strategize against seemingly insurmountable odds. Victory becomes a rare and hard-fought achievement, requiring every ounce of determination and resilience you possess.

(400) RIVAL-SAN!- Every man needs a rival but you seem to be a bit too good. This rival will be the Martinez to your Date. You find yourself pitted against a rival of unparalleled skill and talent, a formidable opponent who stands as the epitome of excellence in the boxing world. Like aforementioned duo, this rival sees you as little more than a minor obstacle on their path to greatness. Every encounter with this rival becomes a dramatic clash of titans, pushing you to your limits and testing your resolve like never before. Overcoming this rival will require unwavering determination and a willingness to go beyond your perceived limitations.

(400) Glass jaw/ Needle punches: Your punches lack the devastating force needed to knock out opponents, and your durability in the ring leaves much to be desired. With a glass jaw and needle-like punches, victory becomes a fleeting dream, and your fights often end in defeat or narrow decisions. Embracing a defensive and strategic approach becomes imperative, as you rely on evasive maneuvers and tactical precision to survive against more powerful adversaries.

(400) Injury Prone: Your body has become fragile over time at a faster rate compared to most fighters, making you susceptible to injuries that could derail your boxing career. Even minor sparring sessions can lead to painful setbacks, forcing you to constantly manage your physical condition. As a result, your training must be strategic and cautious, focusing on prevention rather than improvement.

(600) Fresh blood! You have attracted the attention of a powerful and influential boxing promoter who sees you as a potential threat to their fighters. As a result, you find yourself targeted by sabotage and underhanded tactics designed to undermine your efforts in the boxing world. This may include everything from smear campaigns and false accusations to orchestrated fights against heavily favored opponents. While you may possess the skills to rise in the ranks, the constant interference makes every victory hard-fought and fraught with challenges but I'm sure you can push through despite the disadvantages!.

(600) Master of the Sunday punch: You find yourself bound by a strange compulsion to rely solely on your signature move, known as the "Sunday Punch," in every fight you participate in. This limitation forces you into a predictable and inflexible fighting style, leaving you vulnerable to opponents who can exploit your reliance on a single technique. As a trainer, your students may also fall victim to this narrow-minded approach, hindering their growth and development as fighters

Scenario! Exclusive to Professional and Coach: Some Views Look Better From The Top:

You made a promise to yourself a long time ago that you or someone you trained will reach the status of world champion. With this drawback your end goal is for you or someone you trained personally to become a world champion in any of the boxing organizations that exist at this point in time.

Ending

Your time in the ring is over, did you accomplish your goals, perhaps discover the elusive question of what being strong is, maybe you just watched a lot of overly dramatic fights where people punched each other across the ring. Either way your time is done and now you have your last decisions to make.

Option 1: Return

With this option, you can choose to return to your old world, leaving behind the memories and experiences of the boxing training journey you've undertaken in the new world. Upon returning, time will continue from the day you left your old world. This option allows you to bring back any treasures or insights you've gained during your training journey and apply them to your life in your original world.

Option 2: Stay in the New World

Alternatively, you can choose to stay in the new world, where you'll continue to live your life. As you've discovered, this world is quite similar to your original one, so staying here shouldn't change much from where you started. You may even grow fond of the characters and experiences you've had in this world, making it a comfortable option to spend your days.

Option 3: Keep Going down the road

If you're determined to continue on, selecting this option means you'll continue to pursue your dreams wherever else. As you continue your journey, remember to hold onto the memories and lessons you've learned so far.

Notes!

The perks echoes of strength is meant to copy the traits of certain fighters in the series and how they evoke images or feelings to the person they are fighting. Feel free to personalize the visual effects for Echoes of Strength, whether it's a lion's roar, jet airplane noises, or a streak of fire with each hit but don't expect actual fire or something more than having your opponents stunned for a moment. It's all imagination

No Pain Trance can typically be used about twice per fight. Achieving the automatic mastery seen in elite fighters like Martinez requires immense training, so it's best not to rely on it for anything beyond emergencies until you reach that skill level. However, if you choose the I Didn't Feel a Thing perk, you may be able to extend its usage due to your enhanced stamina and resilience.

Training will allow each boxing perk to grow, unlocking new potential and power beyond their initial strengths.

Any benefits gained from Monster alongside Monsters will grant you a natural talent and fighting prowess reminiscent of Takamura, who once took on a bear in a fist fight and a room full of champion boxers with ease. However, this power comes with a trade-off: a tendency to develop arrogance and a tunnel vision on winning at all costs, which could make you go from an admired figure to someone coldly dismissive of others' struggles. You might even find yourself pushing others harshly if they fall short, holding them to an unrealistic standard like blaming your good friend for getting punch drunk by face blocking like you were taught because you disappointed the coach by not going above and beyond despite being a world ranked boxer and an ex featherweight champion or turning into someone more similar to Bryan Hawk if you indulge too much. Any mental affects of such arrogance are gone after ten years and the jump ends

, Aokimura is designed for slapstick moments and comedic relief in lighter scenes. It won't interfere with essential training or serious fights, though you might find yourself becoming the butt of jokes among friends. Rest assured, it's all in good fun, and there's no risk of your friends misinterpreting your character's intentions in serious or damaging ways. Don't worry, you won't be in trouble from your friends mistakenly thinking you're a pedophile or anything.

Spirit Slap will energize your fighter's stamina but not heal any damage acquired and it may have, a possible consequence is that it may lead to an irritable fighter who is too focused on their fight turning that frustration on you.

Will add more notes as needed.

Many thanks to the anons that helped finalize the jump. Any additional feedback or criticisms would be greatly appreciated!
