

Speaker for the Dead Jump

By SJ-Chan & Hunting Time

V.2

It's been three thousand years since Ender the Xenocide destroyed the Bugger race, eliminating the only star-faring sentient race Mankind has ever encountered... or so everyone assumes. Andrew "Ender" Wiggin and his sister Valentine have spent the last few millennia jumping from world to world, using the time dilation effect of light speed travel to cross vast swaths of time.

Now, though, Ender has been summoned to the Catholic World of Lusitania, home to the only other sophont race humanity has yet encountered, the Pequeninos, also known as The Piggies. They are a primitive race that share their world with a human colony of Portuguese Catholics... and the most terrifying disease humanity has ever encountered, the lethal "Descolada". Ender, a Speaker for the Dead, has been called to speak for a murdered Xenologer... and in coming sets in motion a plot to end the threat of the Descolada... and the Piggies... once and for all... even if it means destroying the planet.

Be warned, the Descolada is incredibly deadly and has no cure. If you are not immune to disease, you might not want to come here. If you do anyway, the Piggy and Queen origins are both immune to the Descolada, and having the Recolada Virus in your system makes you immune to the Descolada. Nominally, the Descolada continues to mutate past every cure, every vaccine, every acquired immunity. It should be incurable. If you think you can cure it, fine. It's your story. If you cure it without the Recolada to replace it, that cure will kill every native lifeform on Lusitania as they require the Descolada to reproduce.

You begin this jump anywhere you like... as long as that location is on the planet Lusitania. Here's +1000 CP just for that.

Changelog v2

Added Companion Import Rules. Added Queen Import Rule. Added Shadow of Yourself Drawback. Added Getting Out of Dodge Perk.

ORIGINS

*Items in Red are optional, origin specific drawbacks.
They do not count against the drawback limit.*

Speaker for the Dead: You are one of the Necromancers of this society, one who speaks for the dead, learning all they can about a person and then, in an approximation of that person's own words, speaks their life, telling everyone as much of the truth as has been uncovered. A Speaker reveals the true nature of the dead, casting aside secrecy and illusion to tell the story that must be told in order for the dead to rest easy. You may be any age from 16 to 90, and any sex you prefer, and you may begin with either full knowledge and background within the Starways congress, or simply as a drop in with no background in this Universe.

If you were a Strategos in the Ender's Game Jump, you may resume that persona by taking one of the following Legacies; [Xenocide] or [Race Traitor], depending on if the Buggers were all destroyed or not. The two are mutually exclusive. Only one Jumper / Companion can take one of these.

Xenocide [+200]: You carry with you the Legacy of the deaths of an entire species, an act which has haunted humanity for 3,000 years. If anyone learns your true identity, they will treat you as a war criminal and shun you.

Race Traitor [+200]: You carry with you the Legacy of all the deaths in all the Human-Bugger wars which have plagued humanity for the last 3,000 years. All humanity knows of your betrayal, and if they learn you still live, their rage might be difficult to contain. Even if you made peace between Buggers and Man, the galaxy is a small place and population pressures long ago pushed the two races to war, lacking as they did a fundamental appreciation of the value of each other.

Xenologer: You are a scholar of alien societies, an anthropologist among the strange and a researcher of the hundreds of cultures and tens of thousands of subcultures that have grown up inside the Human Diaspora. You'd even study Xenos, such as the Buggers and the Piggies, if you can find them. You can either begin with working knowledge of the Starways Congress and its worlds, or as a Drop In with no memory of this place and no background to cloud your judgement.

If you were a Hegemon in the Ender's Game Jump, you may resume that persona by taking one of the following Legacies; [Once and Future Hegemon] or [The Man who Lost the World] depending on if you left behind a united Earth when you left. The two are mutually exclusive. Only one Jumper / Companion can take one of these.

Once & Future Hegemon [+200]: Even 3,000 years after your time, people still read your words and speak of your leadership as a golden time. They have elevated you to a position of near godhood, and speak of your coming return in awe. Some will expect you to lead, others will expect you to end corruption, others to bring about a promised age. There will be no way to please them all, and what's worse, there will be those afraid you'll try. They are all aware you have returned from your long exile.

The Man who Lost the World [+200]: The nations of Earth may have set aside, after many long years of strife, their feuding ways long enough to colonize the stars, but they have left behind a Starways Congress that is as fractured and internally divided as the United Nations. There are interplanetary wars between human colonies and terrorism is a constant problem. And everyone seems to think it's your fault somehow. They are all aware you have returned from your long exile.

Queen [200]: Ever wanted to be a 3 meter tall telepathic Ant-Queen? Then you're in the right place. Formic Queens, aka Bugger Queens or Hive Queens, have access to the memories of their entire race, can telepathically communicate with each other and with their offspring (of which they have billions) and are incredibly durable. All Formics have heavy exoskeletons that function as armor and environment suits, as well as a sturdy endoskeleton. They are all but immune to even engineered diseases and can survive limited exposure to the vacuum of space. They have wings for flight (although most mature queens are too big to actually fly) and antennae which allow them to sense vibrations. They have large compound eyes and are exceptionally intelligent. They are also all female. Only the Formic Queen is fully sentient. All her offspring are animal intelligence or lower. Although humanity feels guilty about destroying the Formic Race, they are exceptionally Xenophobic and unlikely to look forward to the reemergence of a competing species that can drastically out-populate humanity.

Drone [+300]: So, you want to be a Male Formic? This option is for you. Unfortunately, being a male formic means you don't have access to any of the non-free perks in the Formic Line. You gain their armored carapace, wings for flight, and incredible disease resistance, as well as the phloetic communication. This does not count against your drawback limit. You can still purchase them for later use, but even if you can change sex in this jump, they are locked away until later, and cannot be used at the full strength of a Queen, ever. Flipping the sex of a Drone form results in a Worker, not a Queen. Any companion can choose to be a Drone.

Piggy [+100]: You are a member of the Pequeno race, the sentient half-plant, half-animal sophonts native to the planet Lusitania. Diminutive, pig nosed, covered in brown fur, and skilled at climbing trees, they have almost no native technology and require the deadly Descolada virus to maintain their lifecycle. Piggy biology is complex (see the notes section) but, of the three stages of their lifecycle, only the second is mobile and capable of independent action and direct communication. These are the Wives (sterile females) and Brothers (immature males). Once a Brother is wise enough or has achieved something great enough, they are ritually killed and “planted” in soil to grow into a Fathertree. The same happens to Wives when a new Mothertree is needed. Fathertrees are sapient and can communicate philotically (i.e. telepathically) with other philotic species, or with Brothers and Wives using “Father Tongue”. Mothertrees cannot communicate at all and do not demonstrate any brain function. Brothers use Brother Tongue or Portuguese or Stark (aka Starcommon, Starways Congress’s version of English) to communicate with each other and with humans (most Brothers have human names) and use a sacred language known as “Wives Tongue” to communicate with Wives. Although these genders have no relationship to human genders, they are as close as English can get. You may choose to be either a Wife or a Brother, but transformation into a Mothertree or Brothertree (what happens when a Brother is killed outside of the planting ritual) will result in a failed chain. Transformation into a Fathertree will not end the chain, though if it happens, you gain the Fathertree form as your alt-form, not the Piggy form. Humanity as a whole fears any competition from Xenos and Piggies are not allowed off of the planet of Lusitania. The human citizens of Lusitania view the Piggies as savages.

Fatherhood Suits You [+400]: If you wish, you may begin the jump as a Fathertree. This renders you immobile and means you can only communicate with other philotic lifeforms (normally only Jane and the Hive Queen). If you choose this option, you can import any number of your companions as Piggies for free. You gain a free Mothertree for your little tribe and the Philotic Thought perk free of charge. All your shapeshifting, telepathy, and other communication perks are disabled by taking this option. You wanted to be a tree, you’re stuck being a tree. This does not count against the Drawback limit. If you buy Philotic Communication, it is not locked out, since it upgrades your Philotic Thought. Companions can be Fathertrees if they decide to be Piggies. They cannot import other companions, but they also get a free Mother Tree and the Philotic Thought perk.

PERKS

Speaker Perks

Speak to the Masses [100] (Free for Speakers): You possess a rare gift for speaking to people, either individually or in large groups, and convincing them that they want to do that which you want them to do, either by expressing how it's in their best interest, or by shaming them with deeds of the past. As always, the better you know your target group, the more effective this is. Comes with a gift for oratory and clears up any stage fright you might have.

Observational Analysis [200] (Discounted for Speakers): When you focus on an individual, be they human or alien, you gain insight into how that individual thinks, the reasons for their actions, and the methods to their madness. If your focus is purely passive, it may take days or even months to gain true insight, but if you speak to them or their associates, read things they've written, view art they have created, or even see how they raised their children, this process goes much faster. While this isn't mind-reading, the more you understand someone, the better you will be at predicting or explaining their actions. Your perception for details about an individual and the quirks of their behavior is drastically increased.

A Personal History [400] (Discounted for Speakers): When you speak to other people, you possess the ability to sift past their delusions and biases and outright lies to get to the heart of the matter, to find out the truth of what actually happened. This requires more than simple conversation, as this is an interviewing tool, but with it, you gain a sense of when people are being less than honest in recalling the past or talking about their own abilities and memories. This also grants you the ability to use that talent on yourself... though interviewing yourself might seem a little crazy.

Parallel Thought [600] (Discounted for Speakers): You can think two different thoughts at the same time, carry on a conversation with one person while telepathically communicating with another, or working on two different mental problems at the same time. Both tasks receive your complete mental strength. Although this begins with 2 parallel lines of thought, you can, with training, increase the number of parallel thought processes you can maintain, though it becomes progressively harder to maintain the more processes you are running simultaneously. If you possess multiple entities within yourself, you can have as many thought processes as you have entities within yourself plus one.

Xenologer Perks

Cultivated Mind [100] (Free for Xenologers): Cultures, both human and alien, are transparent to you. Spend a few days among them and you'll come to understand their ways and customs. A few weeks and you'll grow to understand their motivations and aspirations. A couple of months is enough to learn all their taboos as well as their languages. A year or two and you'll be able to blend into their culture seamlessly, with even the most xenophobic and alien looking species having to overcome their confirmation bias to even realize that you aren't actually one of them with a particularly squishy exoskeleton.

When exposed to the ruins and writings of dead cultures, this process doesn't work... unless you possess the Annals & Exposition perk, at which point this process is drastically slowed, but even so, days become weeks, weeks become months, months become years, and years become decades. With enough time and effort, you could create a functioning and mostly accurate recreation of an extinct culture, or with Reconnecting and Words on a Page, prompt people to create what was lost by stirring within them a connection to the original culture. Of course, this is easier with people actually connected to the original culture. It is easier to convince Persians to recreate Assyria than to convince Chinese people to recreate the Aztecs.

Words on a Page [200] (Discounted for Xenologers): When you put pen to paper, or pixels on a screen, you say exactly what you want to say, every time. Your writing becomes compelling, keeping readers all but spellbound, and forcing them to actually consider your arguments rather than rejecting them out of hand. You can inspire others into thoughtfulness, grant greater understanding, or even provoke them to action with relative ease. Once per jump you can pen a Magnum Opus, a work that will go down in history, a book that will be held up as an example to future generations, quoted, debated, revered... Well, actually, you can do it twice, but only once is safe. Doing it twice means your writing ability is drastically reduced thereafter and anything you write after the second becomes highly controversial, divisive, and filled with extremely biased concepts.

This will reset each jump, but Magnum Opuses from one Reality are not guaranteed to have the same weight in new realities. If you return to a world you've previously visited, either through a sequel jump or a warehouse return, you do not gain a refresh of this ability and if you've written two Magnum Opuses in that world, your writing still suffers from extreme bias.

Annals & Exposition [400] (Discounted for Xenologers): By studying the details of the past, you can (with impressive accuracy) recreate the particulars of any historical event, be it last week or fifty-thousand years ago. Obviously, the more details you have, the easier this task is, but your ability to accurately synthesize even fragmentary accounts into a cohesive and sensible whole is nothing short of miraculous. Not only can you explain what happened, but the why and how of it all, the reasons for individual choices, the vagaries of weather and politics, and to put yourself into the mindset of anyone who left behind anything written or recorded. Even from something as prosaic as a requisition form or a shopping list.

Reconnecting [600] (Discounted for Xenologers): Has it really been 5,000 years? Feels like Yesterday. No matter how long you and your friends, acquaintances, or enemies have been separated, all it takes is a couple of seconds and all the old memories and emotions will be as fresh as the day they were made. Centuries might pass between meetings, but each time your relationships will always resume just as they were the last time you spoke to them. This works even if, somehow, their memories have become impaired, restoring what was lost or damaged... unless you're the one who erased / modified those memories.

Queen Perks

Philotic Communication [100] (Free for Queen/Drone): You possess the innate ability to speak mind to mind with any other philotic being or telepathic being anywhere in the galaxy, as long as you know who they are and have a general sense of where they are. This does not grant nor act as a conduit for any form of mind-reading, even if you are normally capable of such acts. Unlike Philotic Thought, this does allow you to establish a channel by which a non-philotic telepath can respond, but if you shut off the conduit, they cannot re-establish it.

Formica Armor [100] (Free for Drone): You possess the hardened exoskeleton of a member of the Formic Race. It will protect you for short periods of time as if it were an envirosuit, is better armor than ballistic kevlar, is self repairing, and comes with wings that allow you to fly like a grasshopper. Unfortunately, it is extremely insensate, which is why you have antennae for sensing vibrations, as your armor lacks that ability except on the most basic level. You also lack external ears, but your chemical senses are drastically enhanced, giving you a better sense of smell than even a common ant.

Inverse Communism [200] (Discounted for Queen/Drone): You can take direct control of any member of any Hive Organism as long as the Hive Mind or its closest nodal link is not mentally stronger than you. The stronger the individuality of any hive member, the more it can resist your actions, but anything with lower brain function than a common dog is easily controlled. While initially you'll be limited to a few dozen, as your control and experience grows, you'll find you can shape the behaviour of almost limitless numbers of subordinate workers and drones simply by continuously shifting which ones you're actively controlling. Such multitasking will become second nature. If you also possess Philotic Communication, you'll be able to sense, and sometimes interfere with, the signals used by other Hive Minds to control their drones and workers. If you don't understand the name of the perk, it is a central tenet of Communism that "The Workers Control the Means of Production".

Queen Me [400] (Discounted for Queen): You possess the ability to give birth to Drones, Workers, specialized Bugs, and even other Queens. If you are not a Bugger Queen, this is limited to one kind of common hive type insect (bees, termites, ants, etc.) that are small enough to emerge from your mouth. If you are a Bugger Queen however, you can give birth to one Drone, one Worker, one Warrior, or several lesser Bugs every day, though you'll have to spend the entire day as a Bugger to do so. Drones are males whose job it is to keep you... ahem... in the Queenly way. They cling to you all the time and act as your protection.

You'll need them to create anything else, especially another Queen. Drones are semi-sapient and will not die if you become cut off from them. Workers are your main workforce and are smart enough to follow orders, but that's it. Warriors are bigger and tougher than Workers, but ill-suited for menial tasks. Lesser Bugs do all the basic tasks, such as mining, farming, cleaning, or terraforming. They are genetically programmed to do one thing and they'll keep doing it until they die. Most of them can't even defend themselves.

You can even create Bugs whose job it is to build biotech spaceships, weapons, systems, or structures. Once a decade you can birth another Queen, if you desire. She will have all your memories and all Bugger Queen perks, whether or not you do. If you are a queen and do not buy this perk, you are a Sterile Queen.

Biotech Creation [600] (Discounted for Queen/Drone): You can adapt your biology to resist almost any harmful agent (chemical, biological, radiation, virus, temperature variation...) as long as there is a non-negligible chance you'll survive exposure for more than a few seconds. Not only can you do this, you can pass those adaptations along to your offspring. Furthermore, you become able to invent new and exotic adaptations for your children / creations, such as turning normal technological objects into biotech. If you aren't a Bugger Queen, you'll need some method of gestating these creations (like a massive genetics and in vitro lab full of cultivation tanks), but a Bugger Queen's body is capable of either creating living things on her own, or creating Bugs designed to build independent systems, such as, for example, a bug whose abdomen contains ten upgraded human hearts for implantation... or even self implantation. Or a bug which builds Biotech PS4s. The only limits on this are your knowledge of the sciences and technology.

Piggy Perks

Part Plant, Part Animal [100] (Free for Piggies): You can absorb nutrients both as an animal (eating, drinking, breathing, etc)... or simply by soaking up UV, CO<sub>2</sub>, and Water, plus trace nutrients from the ground you're standing on. Whenever it would be advantageous to be a plant, you are a plant, and whenever it would be advantageous to be an animal, you're that too. If it would be disadvantageous to be one, but not the other... then that's what you are.

Fast Learning [100] (Discounted for Piggies): Whenever you have a functioning example to work from, or a teacher to learn from, your learning rate is enhanced massively. You can learn in months what normally takes people years, as long as someone is willing to show you how things work. Or you could spy on them.

Brotherwood [200] (Discounted for Piggies): You can, by a simple act of will, create high quality wooden objects out of your own flesh. This process is painless and takes only a few minutes, but using it too often will leave you very thin as the mass comes out of your body.

Descolada [400] (Discounted for Piggies): You can, by destructively absorbing another natural lifeform, gain access to any or all of its biological abilities (but not memories). This completely destroys the original lifeform. Of course, this is predicated on you being able to defeat without destroying said lifeform, since they're unlikely to hold still for the process. Also, any lifeform immune to (or incredibly resistant to) disease is immune to this effect. You are also a vector for the incredibly deadly Descolada virus, which you take with you from jump to jump. You and your companions are immune to its more harmful effects. Cannot be taken with Recolada.

Recolada [500] (Discounted for Piggies): This functions identically to Descolada, but the act of absorbing another lifeform has become symbiotic. You and they merge into a single new lifeform, possessing the memories and personalities of both. You no longer act as a vector for the Descolada Virus, and are rendered immune to it. You act as a vector for the harmless Recolada Virus, which renders anyone exposed to it immune to all manufactured viruses and destroys the Descolada on contact. Cannot be taken with Descolada.

Philotic Thought [600] (Discounted for Piggies): Somehow, you've gained the greatest power of a Piggy Fathertree, without having been planted in the ground. You can now think philotically... that is, your thoughts are faster than light. Neurochemical thought has to travel through neurons, and moves roughly 270 mph. Your thoughts now travel instantly to any part of your body... or to any receiver (any telepathic or philotic being you know)... anywhere in the galaxy, practically instantly. While this does allow telepathic communication, that communication can only be to telepaths or philotic beings and only a philotic being can respond. It does not allow mindreading of anyone.

A word of warning; while this means that your reaction time and thought processes are many orders of magnitude faster than normal, your pain receptors also function at this incredible speed, instead of the normal 4.4mph. It won't make things actually hurt more... there just won't be any delay at all between being hurt and feeling that pain. If combined with Philotic Communication, this grants the ability to create Auia... that is, the ability to give a soul to any entity, though the process is incredibly draining and requires giving of yourself to do so. You are actually giving up a small fragment of your own soul to do so.

General Perks

Getting Out of Dodge [100]: You have a sixth sense for when things are about to get dangerous in a general way, the kind of danger that suggests it would be exceptionally wise to get the hell out of the area as soon as possible. Not only that, but this sense can also lead you to those who can help you get out of the area, or who might also be best served getting out of the area with you. Unfortunately, it doesn't really help you actually get out of the area.

Delphiki's Organelles [200]: A biological upgrade that introduces the ability to turn the excess growth associated with Anton's Key off (and theoretically back on again if so desired), thus countering the eventual immobilization and then death by heart failure of those who have it. One need not be a carrier of Anton's Key to benefit from this, as it grants the ability to switch expedited physical growth on and off at will... say if you wanted childhood to last half as long, or wanted to stay petite and childlike forever. While active, you will find yourself continuing to grow a few inches taller every year, or more when combined with Anton's Key. While deactivated, you won't grow any larger (unless you get fat) than you are at that moment. Each Altform can have its own growth pattern if you desire.

ITEMS

Starways Credits [25]: You have the equivalent of 50,000 US dollars in 1980's money. Every time you purchase this, the amount doubles.

Contacts [25]: You have a contact in a given field who will willingly take your call and give you the best advice or assistance they can. Each contact has a specific field (science, military, law enforcement, medical, academia... there is a transfinite list). Each contact automatically updates every jump, to the best of the limits of the jump. A scientist contact may become an alchemist or a particularly intelligent squirrel or a highly competent Tutorial AI depending on the setting. The contact's name always remains the same, and they'll remember the last time they helped you out... in the context of the new jump.

A Drone of Your Own [25] (Must be a Queen): You gain 4 Workers or specialized Bugs. Every time you purchase this, that number doubles. This keeps you from having to birth them each jump. This cannot be used to buy additional Queens and 1 Drone is worth 4 Workers. Alternatively, you may use a purchase of this to import one of your companions as a Drone, giving them the Formic Armor and Philotic Communication perks free and allowing them to function as Drones for the purposes of stimulating your reproductive cycle, shall we say. Bugs and Workers are animal intelligence and count as pets, and (if you have Biotech creation) can look like almost anything. Drones are intelligent on their own, although they only live to protect and mate with a Queen. Any Workers, Bugs, or Drones purchased with this respawn within 24 hours without you having to lay them again and waiting for them to hatch. They also automatically update with your newest biotech at the beginning of each jump. If you want to update them sooner, you'll need to... replace them the old fashioned way.

Ansible [50] (Free for Speaker): You gain two ansible units. They're about the size of a video game cabinet and can communicate instantly across any distance... including across dimensional boundaries. Each time you buy this, you gain 2 more units. Speakers gain 4 Ansible Units for free but must pay for additional units.

Recorder Eyes [100]: You have cybernetic optical implants that record everything you see in perfect visual fidelity and can upload that information into any linked computer system. Can be purchased multiple times for Auditory and Olfactory information.

Brothertree [100] (Discount Piggy): A Piggy Brothertree is added to your warehouse. If you've bought a Fathertree, it is added to that plot, but otherwise just sits wherever you put it. It looks like a big oak, is not sapient, and only has the Brotherwood Perk. It can convert CO2, water, and light into wooden objects at the rate of 20 lbs a day and knows what to produce by being asked in Brothertongue. For an additional 100CP, Any upgrade applied to the Father Tree is applied to the Brothertree.

Mothertree [200] (Discount Piggy, requires a Fathertree): A Piggy Mothertree is added to your Fathertree's lot. It will produce Little Mothers so you can transplant Piggies onto any planet you like. Purchasing this will mean that a small Piggy village will grow outside your warehouse and they may occasionally come by to ask to borrow some sugar or a pulse rifle. They can only enter the warehouse with your permission. You can leave a Mothertree and Fathertree on any temperate world you visit. Mother trees are not sentient, but for an additional 100 CP, any upgrade applied to the Fathertree carries over to the Mothertree.

Path Virus Drug [200]: You gain a small sample of a drug that replicates the retroviral cocktail used to give the Godspoken of the planet Path their near superhuman intelligence and intuition. Unfortunately, just like the original genetic modifications, this drug has some serious side-effects... namely that it gives those who use it an extreme variant of Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder. You have enough doses of the drug to last for a month. You receive a new month's supply every year, whether you've used up the last batch or not. With proper storage, the drug can remain viable for up to 20 years (unless you have stasis tech.) The OCD effects become more pronounced the longer you take this drug. Buying this a second time allows you to give a companion a permanent supply of the drug, but you can't use their supply and they will absolutely become as OCD as they can get. When you stop taking the drug, the OCD will fade over time as the drug leaves your system.

House [200]: You gain a small, comfortable family house appropriate to whatever planet you are on. It has comfortable, well aged furniture, pictures of you and your family, and small personalized rooms for each, as well as a well stocked kitchen and pantry, and all the common conveniences of the day (indoor plumbing, telephone service, holographic TV... whatever a middle class family might have). Every jump, this house will reappear near your starting location (or on the first world you arrive in if you end up someplace awful). You'll always know the address, but have no real control over where it ends up. It could be downtown, could be in the country... but always someplace not terribly inconvenient. If you have an ID for that world, it lists your home address.

Computer [200]: You possess the most powerful personal computer that the Starways Congress can produce. It is an experimental prototype and utterly cutting edge for this time period, roughly 3,300 years into the future.

Fathertree [400] (Discount Piggy): A Piggy Father Tree is added to your Warehouse in a small plot of land just outside the back door. It is temperate, gets rain and sun enough to sustain the Fathertree... though the tree will get lonely as it is a sentient being... unless someone visits it and talks to it. A Father Tree has the Brotherwood and Philotic Thought Perks. This is a companion, though not one you can import in the traditional way. It can import as any tree you buy with CP or have bought with CP, and can absorb the genetics of any natural tree-like or fruit-bearing organism, thus allowing it to become an Apple-Orange-Cherry- Banana-Pineapple-Tree. The Fathertree can be imported as a standard companion, but the body granted by the jump is actually a shell controlled remotely from the Fathertree. The importation of the Fathertree does not actually move the Fathertree out of your warehouse, rather it simply integrates the new tree into the Fathertree.

Spaceship [400] (Discount Xenologer): You gain a Park Drive Spaceship, a freighter with 5,000 tons of cargo space, a lander shuttle, and berthing and galley for 20. It normally needs a crew of 5, but can be operated by a single person as long as nothing goes wrong. It travels very close to light speed and is subject to time dilation effects, but not subject to acceleration or deceleration stresses. It simply jumps to near light speed, then shifts back to relative motionlessness in the destination system. It has a complete map of whatever version of the Milkyway Galaxy it's in... but not any other galaxy.

COMPANIONS

The Crew, Back Together [200] (Discount Speaker): You may import up to 8 Companions. They gain one background of their choice for free, but cannot take Drawbacks or buy Items. Strategos & Xenologer Companions gain 300 CP and if you haven't taken the appropriate Legacy for that choice, they can take it to gain +100 CP. Queen Companions gain 200 CP, 400 CP if they choose to be a Drone. Queen Companions can buy "A Drone of Your Own" as many times as they have points for. Piggy Companions gain 400 CP, 600 CP if they choose to be a Fathertree.

The Queen Herself [100] (Free if you already have the Hive Queen from Ender's Game Jump): The Bigger Queen becomes your companion. If she already is, she imports here for free. Either way, she gains all Queen Perks, and can have 20 purchases of "A Drone of Your Own" for free.

DRAWBACKS

You may take up to 600 CP of Drawbacks, or They Lied and one other Drawback.

They Lied [+600/+1000] (Worth more if you took the Hive Queen Companion from Ender's Game Jump): The Formics lied to Ender. They knew about individual identity because their drones have individual identities which the Queens suppress. They knew they were killing sapient beings, they knew they were committing an act of aggression against another Hive. They attacked humanity, not realizing there were quite so many of us, then realized they couldn't compete against billions of individual sentient minds. Because it takes them many many human generations to establish new Hives, they knew that Humanity would obliterate them given time, so they sacrificed themselves to leave behind a new queen who could kickstart their civilization once enough time had passed. They used Ender to make Humanity sympathetic to them.

But they did more than that. They sent dozens of infant queens to dozens of hidden worlds, leaving a queen to spy on Ender... and (if you bought her) one to spy on you. The Formics played Ender (and you?) for a fool. Good luck winning this war. If you have the Hive Queen Companion, every Queen has a complete knowledge of your abilities and every perk you've given the companion Queen. She will not help you against her sisters, but if you've paid CP to import her into at least 5 other jumps, she won't side against you either. Her enmity or neutrality has nothing to do with time or loyalty, this is a genetic imperative placed within her by the other queens, one even she was unaware of. The fact that you've improved her genome enough to make a difference is what will sway her behavior. She has access to your warehouse, which you cannot block and you cannot dismiss her until after the jump ends, but anything she uses against you will respawn at the end of the jump. It is up to you if you will forgive her or not.

Descolada Vector [+400]: You are an active source of the Descolada Virus (cannot be taken with the Descolada or Recolada Perk.). Your presence is lethal to almost all living things and those few that survive it are usually mutated horribly. Anyone who realizes you are the vector will attack you with everything they have.

3000 Years at the Speed of Light [+300]: Time keeps on slipping, slipping, slipping... into the future. You begin this jump just after the end of the Ender's Game jump and at utterly random intervals slip forward days, weeks, months, years, or decades into the future. This will never place you in immediate danger (the volcanic island you're on might be going to erupt, but not within the next 20 minutes or so), but you have no control over it, nor on where in all of human occupied space you end up. This will leave you arriving on Lusitania right around the time Ender does, sometime in the 8th year of your jump, with no knowledge of how you got there.

Xenophobia [+300]: All other races are scary as hell... and they're probably out to steal your planets from you. You'd better destroy them all before they destroy you. Or so the voices in your head keep insisting. You're a rabid Xenophobe, hating anyone and anything that's of a species different from your own. You will not willingly transform into any other species than the one you picked for this jump and you will instinctively treat all your companions that have alien alt-forms with deep suspicion. If their original form was alien to whatever you are now, you'll be especially distrustful. This does not apply if you are a Piggy Fathertree and you imported them as Piggies.

Shadow of Yourself [+300]: You're no longer the Jumper. You're someone who resembles the jumper, but not as cool, powerful, or otherwise special. You have only what you purchased here... and the Jumper has all the rest. Once the jump ends, you'll become the Jumper again and your choice will determine if you stay or move on or go home. If the Jumper or you get killed, it won't end your chain as long as one of you survives until the end of the jump. All your companions will think the Jumper is you. You will not gain the Jumper's memories once the jump ends.

Authorial Psychosis [+200]: Sure, in the normal course of events, Orson Scott Card's rabid conservatism wouldn't begin to manifest until book 3, but you get it full force in this jump. All non-heteronormative behaviour is explicitly banned... including sex for purposes other than reproduction, and all females are expected to be highly supportive, nurturing, and compassionate, while all males are expected to be incredibly... manly? Sociopathic? Power hungry? Considering that Peter eventually replaces Andrew... who can say?

Descolada Infection [+200]: You've been combined with one of your companions for this jump. You both share the same body, have all the combined Perks, but cannot shield your thoughts from each other and each of you only controls ½ the body and ½ the perks... scrambled at random. At the end of the jump, this reverts to normal, but you can give them one of your perks permanently, though this strips you of it.

Descolada v.2.0 [+100]: The Descolada now is a computer virus that randomly combines all your files and media. They revert back to normal at the end of the jump.

Child of the Mind of Christ [+100]: No Nooky For YOU!

Starways Congressman [+50]: You are a member of Starways Congress. No one trusts you, everyone gets paranoid around you, and you have to attend endless meetings three times a month to discuss the trade imbalance in sector 15, regulation of Antarian Beetle Juice, or the situation on Lusitania. No one in Congress ever listens to you, no matter how convincing you normally are. Comes with one free Ansible Unit so you can stay in contact with the Starways Congress all the time. You can't break it, give it away, or otherwise rid yourself of it in order to skip out on your duties.

A Reversion to the Mean [+50]: The official Charter Religion of Lusitania is no longer Catholicism. It is now something else even more fundamentalist, intolerant, and overbearing. It is now... Scientology.

Maker Maker [+0]: Somehow, Speaker for the Dead is now the Sequel to Alvin Maker instead of Ender's Game. Everything is now fantasy skewed instead of sci-fi and very little makes sense.

Piggy Biology Note

"The pequeninos exhibit an extreme case of sexual dimorphism, combined with the unique plant/animal symbiosis that characterizes all life in their native planet of Lusitania, thanks to a virus that was known to the people of Lusitania only as the descolada. Taking this symbiosis to the extreme, pequeninos are unique in that they metamorphose from animal to plant.

Fertile females of the species are impregnated while still in non-sentient worm-like infant form from the fathertrees that form the third stage in the development of Pequeno males. Typically called little mothers, they do not survive labor as they have no birth canal — embryo pequeninos have to eat their way out of their infant mothers.

This birth takes place within the birthing place or else the mother-tree of the pequenino tribe. Following birth, there follows what pequeninos call their "first life" or "life of darkness," their life as infants and children which they spend still within the mothertree. Most female children will not pass this stage of development, dying as they deliver the new generation of pequeninos, though a few of them, those either sterile or deliberately selected for the role will grow up to full stature in order to become wives, the matriarchs of the tribe.

Male children will eventually grow up to their "second life" or "half-lit life", leaving the mothertree. In this time the male pequeninos, calling themselves now "brothers", try to distinguish themselves, hunting and foraging, and very often waging war against other tribes. Also they carry the infant mothers to and from the fathertrees. It is in this stage that pequeninos have the most humanoid appearance, and the most comprehensible, and relatable, type of existence for humans.

In this stage male pequeninos don't have reproductive capabilities. This only happens in their "third life" or "life in the full light", which is a privilege selected only for those pequeninos that have distinguished themselves, either in combat or otherwise — a decision usually made by the matriarchal wives. Male pequeninos that are given this honor, are seemingly ritually killed by a fellow tribe member, but in reality the methodical cuts and removal of certain organs that they undergo helps them transform into "fathertrees" that grow out of what are seemingly their corpses.

These fathertrees, or simply fathers, look completely like trees in appearance, but nonetheless the pequeninos can still communicate with them using the "father-tongue"; and the trees can also communicate with each other. Communication from father tree to brothers requires the brother to tap the father with sticks, allowing the father to adjust cavity sizes inside his trunk to vary the sound. With the sap on their barks, they fertilize the infant mothers carried to them by the "brothers".

If a pequenino dies without the proper rituals, he will become a brothertree, a tree that does not retain its sentience as the fathertrees do. It is from these trees that the pequeninos take their wood, by speaking to them in the "fathertongue" and singing them into the wooden tools they need."
